

ROMAIN SEVE

Export Sales Manager

Romain Seve represents Val des Rois, bringing an international perspective and a deep connection to the vineyards of southern France. Born in Mâcon in southern Burgundy and raised in the Beaujolais and Mâconnais region, wine was part of his life long before he was able to drink it. While he once dreamed of becoming a professional tennis player, he always felt drawn to international business and working across cultures.

Romain studied commerce followed by a specialization in Wine and Spirits Business, combining his interest in global markets with the wines of his home region. Early in his career, an internship brought him to Toronto where he worked as a brand ambassador helping launch wines from a Languedoc producer. The experience proved to be a turning point, allowing him to represent wines internationally while sharing the stories behind each bottle.

Today, as Export Sales Manager for Val des Rois, Romain focuses on sharing the distinctive character of the estate's Rhône Valley wines with markets around the world. He is particularly excited about the future of the region's high altitude vineyards, which produce wines with freshness, finesse, and elegance that align with the evolving tastes of modern wine drinkers.

Outside of wine, Romain enjoys rock climbing, wakeboarding, basketball, chess, and discovering new foods while traveling. A self-described foodie, he believes some of the best pairings remain the simplest, like a glass of wine shared with charcuterie among friends or a fresh white wine alongside goat cheese.
